Urban Ranking Indexes Facilitate Better Decision Making

A web policy-talk Demystifying Urban Ranking Indexes was organised by Impact and Policy Research Institute (IMPRI) on 7 July. Charing the talk, Shri. Hitesh Vaidya, Director, NIUA highlighted the need to focus on building the capacity of urban local body officials to understand and use urban indices to improve their decision-making for effective urban management. The policy-talk mooted the idea of computing urban development related indices at the smallest spatial unit such as the ward level for improved evidence based decision making. "There is a need to review all the urban ranking indexes in an integrated manner to reduce overlaps, and bring out linkages between indexes and SDGs.

-Chetan Vaidya, Independent Urban Advisor

"Building capacities at the local level is critical for urban indexes, and the indexes are useful for monitoring of actual services on ground."

-Meera Mehta, Professor Emeritus, CEPT

"There is a dearth of information at the city level. The economy part in cities is critical, but the aspects on city generating the economy and productivity is missing."

-Dinesh Mehta, Professor Emeritus, CEPT

"Economic indicators are crucial in ranking indexes not only to rank the citie possible's, but to change the political-economy of the cities."

-Pritika Hingorani, Director and Research Fellow, IDFC
